Deputies were dispatched to the NCSO lobby in reference to a possible identity theft. However, the complainant left the lobby prior to deputies' arrival. Deputies later made contact with the complainant via phone. The complainant stated she was attempting to apply for state benefits assistance and was informed that she was allegedly receiving income from an employer identified as Visiting Angels. The complainant advised that she has never worked for that company and requested a police report to assist with her benefits application. The complainant also stated she had contacted Visiting Angels, and they agreed to provide her with a written statement confirming she had never been employed by them. Deputies explained that she would need to bring that documentation-on the company's official letterhead-to the NCSO. It was further explained that deputies could not generate an identity theft report without some form of evidence supporting her claim that she had not worked for the company. The complainant was advised that a report could be generated by any deputy upon her return with the appropriate documentation.
